Microsoft needs to be repentant and not rewarded for its previous actions.

For years Microsoft has attempted to squeeze into the K-12 education market and now they elect to do it as "compensation" for previous wrong-doing.

Please don't give them this "free lunch." If they want to do penance for k-12 education let them drop a billion dollars into the e-fund and supply truly FREE internet access to all underfunded schools in the nation.

thanks
